Aviva Health Selected as Northwest Regional Primary Care Association 2022 Summit Award Winner

ROSEBURG, Ore. – Northwest Regional Primary Care Association (NWRPCA) selected Aviva Health as its 2022 Summit Award winner yesterday at its annual spring conference.

According to NWRPCA, whose work focuses on supporting and strengthening nearly 100 community and migrant health centers operating in Alaska, Washington, Oregon, and Idaho, the annual Summit Award honors an individual or organization in its membership that has reached a singular level of achievement in a particular area of expertise or service.

The topic of the 2022 Summit Award is employer of choice, which NWRPCA defines as an organization that offers an excellent and supportive work environment that contributes to positive employee satisfaction and retention rates. More specifically, NWRPCA this year aimed to select a health center that during the COVID-19 pandemic went above and beyond to support and retain staff.

Aviva Health has implemented a variety of employee-support initiatives since the beginning of the pandemic, all of them focused on building resilience among its staff, recognizing and celebrating their efforts to address the needs of the community during COVID-19, and buoying them at home and work during a very challenging time.

“Our staff have worked long hours throughout the pandemic caring for our community, so it was a priority of Aviva Health’s to make sure our people were also cared for,” says KC Bolton, CEO of Aviva Health. “To be recognized by NWRPCA is a true honor and reflection of our team.”

In addition to being selected by NWRPCA as its Employer of Choice Summit Award winner, Aviva Health has been tabbed as Douglas County’s Favorite Place to Work for the past two years in The News-Review Readers’ Choice voting.
